The President's call for the extra Senate session somewhat dissipated the tumult that had come in both chambers yesterday following the Republicans' attempt in the Senate to force the President's hand and compel him to reveal his plane for the protection of American interests at

The Republicans had held a confer ence for the ostensible purpose of discussing a feature of the Revenue Bill. The actual purpose of it, as disclosed later, was interpreted as a challenge to the President personally to furnish reasons to justify the request of the Department of Justice for the passage of a bill authorizing the President to use the land and naval forces of the country to liquidate its neutrality obligations.

The agitation over the President's foreign policy was undoubtedly prompted by the uncertainty of the members of both parties as to the meaning of the Department of Jus-tics bill. Leaders of both Houses have been mystified by what they de-scribed as the "ambiguous and loosedrawn" measure now being considered by the Senate Judiciary Com
